THE CHANGING WORLD

[Copyright: 1923 By The Chicago Tribune.]

Nineteen years ago, near Dayton, O., the Wright Brothers developed the first successful flying machine.

Today, at Dayton, the government has built the largest airplane in the world.

Ten years ago the sight of an airplane blocked traffic in the city streets.

Today an airplane passing over a city attracts only a momentary interest.

Today, summer and winter, rain and shine, the U. S. mail planes span the continent day by day.

Wage Boosts and Other Costs Wipe Out Profits.

Detroit, Mich., Aug. 21.—Increased wages amounting to $600,000 a year granted platform men in the employ of the Detroit department of street railways increased power costs, and contemplated wage increases for other employees will wipe out the net profit of $1,000,000 made by the municipality owned street car lines for the fiscal year ending July 1, 1922, Ross Schram, assistant general manager of the line, said today in announcing increased rates for street car fares.

The fares will be increased on Sept. 2 from 5 to 6 cents, with 1 cent for transfers. Nine tickets will be sold for 50 cents under new plan.

WHY Bring in $2,000,000.

It is estimated that approximately $2,000,000 will be derived annually from the fare increase. This amount, according to Mr. Schram, will be sufficient to meet the increased pay roll for platform men, pay approximately $200,000 anticipated wage increases for other employees, take care of $350,000 estimated additional power costs, and leave a balance which can be applied to the extension of the lines.

Effective on All Lines.

The increase in fare is effective on all street car lines within the city of Detroit. All of the lines are municipally owned, and the Detroit United railway interurban cars which run into the city over the municipal lines are permitted to charge the same rate of fare within the city limits as that charged by the Detroit street railways.

COLLISIONS IN CHICAGO

conditions would not result for some time.

EACH BLAMES THE OTHER

Atlantic City, N. J., Aug. 21.—[By the Associated Press.]—Negotiations for a new wage contract in the anthracite industry ended abruptly today, leaving unrelieved the prospect of a suspension of hard coal mining Sept. 1.

Miners' union officials, who walked out of the joint meetings, said the operators' terms for a possible extension of the conflict on behalf of the industry itself had terminated because the operators were unwilling to concede any part of the demand for increased wages made by the men.

The operators asserted that the breaking point was the unwillingness of the union to submit its demands to the test of arbitration.

Both sides agreed to the submission of a report on the situation to the United States coal commission, through James A. Gorman, commissioner, of the joint conference.

It's Up to Government.

Neither group looked for any prevention of a protracted industrial struggle in the anthracite region after Sept. 1 by any other means than government intervention, though S. D. Warriner, chairman of the operators' policy committee, declared he "never lost hope" for peace.

James L. Lusk, president of the United Mine Workers, made no attempt to gloss over the prospect as he saw it of a brief summary of what had preceded the sudden conclusion of the wage conferences, which began Monday.

"Time for mincing words has gone by," he said. "The mine workers are prepared to enter an industrial contest Sept. 1 and to administer to the operators the most severe punishment of their choice." Since the anthracite miners' settlement never to recede or compromise on any point of working conditions or wage matters except after a fight in defeat, our people will go into a fight.

Arbitration Unsatisfactory.

"We make no request to the coal commission. We look for no help from any agency, governmental or otherwise. Our people have tried out arbitration; we never get the offer to have it settled by it unless we are strong enough to do so, without but the mine workers have always found reason for dissatisfaction with arbitration awards in the past."

"Today Mr. Warriner told us that the operators would not and could not grant any wage increases on Sept. 1. There isn't any purpose in further negotiation after that. We feel that the exorbitant and unwarrented increases now taken in the industry would mean wage increases without any increase in the cost of coal to the consumer."

"But, regardless of that, suspension of anthracite coal production will automatically ensue in the anthracite region on the morning of Sept. 1.

Warriner's Account Diflers.

Mr. Warriner, after the breakup, gave a slightly different account of the day's proceedings, insisting that the split came "simply and solely on the question of arbitration." As a last resort in the dispute, he said, the operators had renewed the offer to arbitrate every point in dispute, to keep the mines running, and to make wage advances retroactive in case they were awarded later than Sept. 1.

"Mr. Lewis told us further negotiations would be futile," he declared. "Yet what more, in the name of reason, can the miners offer in order to avert a contest?"

Mr. Warriner said that the operators considered the existing wage scale in the industry to be "more than adequate," but had offered to extend it to March 21, 1923, or to submit the question of an increase to arbitration, on the understanding that President Coolidge would be named to the arbitration board if the miners and their employees could not mutually agree upon a group.

"We've gone to the limit of fairness in the endeavor to adjust these differences," he added. "If the miners see fit to precipitate this break, we'll have to abide by the results."

Whether the operators would attempt to keep the mines running in the face of a union order to its members to keep away, Mr. Warriner would not say.

"We think the public, faced though it is with the likelihood of inconvenience and deprivation from this situation, is ready to consider the economic aspect of the matter," he continued.

"We will accept the public's verdict."

HARRY K. THAW.

Philadelphia, Pa., Aug. 21.—[By the Associated Press.]—John A. Russian, her attorney, yesterday filed a bill in the Superior court, asking that the prenuptial agreement be declared null and void.

In her suite at the Admiral hotel Mrs. Saal hinted vaguely last night that the scrap of paper which led up to an orange blossom altar and a wealthy husband, may, if declared null, lead down to a divorce court and alimony.

The legal grounds on which she seeks to break the agreement are two. Her husband, the bill alleges, fraudulently stated his net worth was only $42,846 instead of $1,500,000. And the wealthy factory owner failed, his wife alleges, to pay her the $10 necessary to bind the agreement.

No Gain in Wisdom.

Second marriages may make a man wiser, but a woman is just as easily fooled, according to Mrs. Saal, who yesterday recalled that the wedding on March 9, 1923, was the second trip down the aisle for both of them. Just a year earlier, the bride, then 21, had divorced Alvin Fiel, her soldier husband, who objected to Saal's attentions to his wife.

Four years before the bridegroom had been divorced by Mrs. Caroline Saal, because she, her bill stated, trained him from the Marigold gardens to the Sheridan road apartment, with an unnamed girl.

In February, 1918, Violet, then a 17-year-old schoolgirl, for whom Fiel had a soft spot, met him again in New York. Fiel, a acquaintance, mentioned the prosperous manufacturer, and his penchant for financing talented embryonic heroines. Then he brought his friend around.

Gifts Were Many.

Saal, then engaged in the manufacture of war munitions as well as phonographs, grew personally interested in drama. He established the future stage star in a luxurious north side apartment, the bill states. And the gifts were many.

His wife, Mrs. Caroline Saal, didn't care to discover new stage stars on the stage.

Saal, then engaged in the manufacture of war munitions as well as phonographs, grew personally interested in drama. He established the future stage star in a luxurious north side apartment, the bill states. And the gifts were many.

Saal told her story to Judge Jacob Hopkins and on June 4, 1919, was granted a divorce, $350 monthly alimony, and the provision for a $50,000 life insurance and a $50,000 bequest at Saal's death.

Then Mr. Saal again asked me to marry him," his present wife took up the story, "and he was with me most of the time. I promised to marry him." But during the first part of July Saal changed his mind.

"I was surprised," the temporarily ill woman admitted, "but in a few days I thought I wouldn't care, so I married Alvin Fiel. That was July 9, 1919." Fiel was an employee of Arrow & Co. and had just returned from France. In the three years later his wife divorced him.

In celebration of the first anniversary of their marriage, Mr. Saal immediately proposed to me," she said. "And he gave me a beautiful engagement ring. And I accepted him."

"I was so tired and so sick, with all the fuss about the divorce, and the horrid things people said. And then Mr. Saal was so wonderful. My ring, he believed, was the best he had. Besides, he said it didn't mean anything, just to sit there. So, of course, I signed it," the woman explained.

GERMANY RACES ALONG TOWARD DICTATORSHIP

Monarchs and Reds
Prepare Coup.

BY GEORGE SELDES.
(Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.)

MUNICH, Aug. 21.—[Tribune Radio.]—Germany is rapidly advancing on the road to a dictatorship. For the last time since the revolution the men leading the government not only realize that dictatorial measures must be taken, but they are showing a willingness to take them.

Another reason for considering this revolutionary action is the knowledge that the monarchists are preparing to set up a military dictatorship when the financial and economic crisis is completed, while the Communists expect to gain control of Germany by a decisive civil war within three months.

Today's further collapses of German money was hastened by the government's own decisions, which are aimed at the financial chaos. The Stressemann cabinet demanded that Germany's rich industrialists, whose wealth is mostly kept in dollars and pounds, deliver immediately $125,000,000 worth. If the industrialists fail voluntarily, the government will force every one to take an oath regarding their foreign currency possessions. If this measure still fails the government contemplates action tantamount to a coup.

SODA FOUNTAIN ON LINER GETS GLANCES, BUT LITTLE BUSINESS

New York, Aug. 21.—[Special.]—Passengers on the Cunard liner Aquitania, which sailed this morning for Southampton and Cherbourg, had their soda fountains open when they discovered that all of the crowded lounge's small, white marble soda fountains, perfectly appointed for the dispensing of those soft drinks that are a little more familiar to Americans than to the English.

Familiarity seemed to breed contempt among most of the passengers, mainly Americans. In spite of the alert readiness of the two white jacketed soda dispensers at the fountain, the soda fountains were not used.

"On all of the ships in the lounge only two half drained soda glasses could be seen when the ship sailed. The majority of those who discovered the soda fountain were satisfied with the mere discovery. Some even went so far as to ask, 'Have we come to this?'

They had. The Aquitania, like the rest of the British liners, carries only medical supplies of liquor on her eastward trip. The vacancy is to be filled in the future by chocolate malted milk, frosted chocolate, sundaes and the like.

ing out the middleman's 100 per cent profits.

Hear Havenstein Resigned.

LONDON, Aug. 21.—A dispatch to the Central News from Berlin says Rudolph Havenstein, president of the Reichsbank, has resigned. The government was informed after the recent general strike. This organization is secretly preparing to take over the government some time.

At a secret meeting of the labor soviets it was declared that the situation warranted great optimism for a proletarian dictatorship shortly, because it was believed that Chancellor Stremann's efforts could not force a return to Germany of funds of the Silesia group and others who have large credits in foreign banks. With the collapse of Chancellor Stremann's financial program the soviets believe the revolutionary situation will result in October or November, when a Red regime will be proclaimed.

The Last Government.

The communists believe the time is approaching when not only the Reds but the monarchist wing and many neutrals will favor a dictatorship.

Many call the Stremann cabinet "the last government of Germany," meaning the next will be chaos or a dictatorship.

Another reason for the communist ries lies in the terrific increase in price of coal and food and coal for the winter, and the large increase in unemployment for the first time in Germany since the war.

The coal situation is most serious.

There is a tremendous shortage on account of the Ruhr occupation and enormous profiteering, making British coal $12 and German coal $25 a ton.

Berlin's street car system expects to close with a fortnight, while the railroads run with foreign coal, charge rates which can pass a bill of lading.

The fall of the railroad service is contemplated. Unemployment stands hundreds of thousands more in the face.

Wants the Industrialists.

Chancellor Stremann's organ, the Zeit, warns industry to pay up.

"Industry must sacrifice immediately and for a long time. Those who refuse to recognize it are grave diggers for the country's future," says the Zeit.

The soviets have decided to tax a "potash tax" for buying and selling potatoes fairly, furnishing coal, and supplying working men with quantities at a minimum price, thus knocking down the price of coal.

BRITISH SEE NO HOPE OF ACCORD IN FRENCH NOTE

Baldwin and Cabinet to Take It Up Today.

BY JOHN STEELE.

(Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.)

LONDON, Aug. 21.—[Tribune Radio.]

—The British pessimism seems fully justified by the French reply to the British note, which, although handed to the British chargé d'affaires in Paris at 9 o'clock this morning, did not reach London until late tonight. The French embassy in London, however, was in possession of the full text this morning.

It is pointed out that the note, while very polite, offers absolutely nothing of constructive value. Premier Poincaré admits that it is true that Germany's capacity to pay at the present time is zero, and therefore a moratorium is necessary, during which France insists on retaining productive guarantees.

This, of course, is interpreted as meaning that France means to remain in the Ruhr indefinitely.

Refute to British.

A suggestion for a modification in the rigors of the Ruhr occupation in proportion to a cessation of the passive resistance to make the protection of French engineers and railway men less necessary also is interpreted as a polite method of saying that France intends to pursue its own policy in spite of anything Great Britain may say or do.

Prison Minister Baldwin will return to London tomorrow and such messages as are available will move to consider the note. Lord Curzon, L. S. Amery, the Earl of Derby, Sir William Joynton-Hicks are all in France, so a cabinet meeting cannot be held.

When he returned in search of the ruin protector he found it!

The incident was considered of such rare honesty that Chief of Police Colman was informed of it.

"You don't mean to say that the man came back to the bureau after two hours' absence and found the 'mush,'" said the chief, in astonishment.

"Well, wonders will never cease."

Comes to Enter Complaint.

The umbrella was given to Mattia Manno, 9705 Avenue L, South Chicago. His errand at the detective bureau was in regard to an automobile upon which he held a mortgage for $600. The car was found in the possession of Anglo-American, a garage gang of alleged robbers arrested a few days ago by Lieut. Michael Grady's squad.

Manno talked with acting Capt. Shoemaker. He left his umbrella outside the latter's office. An hour after he had gone Sergt. Michael Hogan saw the umbrella standing in the corner.

"Some one left his 'rain tent' after him," said Hogan, handing it to the acting captain.

At the 6 o'clock roll call Shoemaker asked the hundred detectives who had been assigned to find out if any one of them had lost his umbrella. Every one of them shook his head.

Such Sterling Honesty!

Half an hour later Manno poked his head in the bureau door. He was sure he had left the umbrella there, but he was not hopeful of ever seeing it again.

"You see umbrella?" he asked of Shoemaker.

"Yes," said the acting boss of the bureau. "Here it is," handing Manno the lost and found.

One Man Dies in a Being Interviewed It was the most remarkable case on record of honesty.

"Never before," he said, "have I heard of such honesty, especially among policemen. It is almost incredible. The most surprising part of the whole affair is that 98 per cent of the men at roll call did not claim they had lost an umbrella. Not one man put in a claim for it. Marvelous!" Marvelous!"

MR. BURGLAR, TRY THIS HOME AND WEEP, WEEP, WEEP

SEEK TRACE OF DR. OTTO WHIPPER, WEALTHY DOCTOR

Or Tackle That and Be Hit with an Arrow.

Gosh! Most anything is likely to happen to an enterprising burglar in Evanson these days. Members of the faculty of Northwestern university are banding together and the careerless youths are fooling around that seat of learning with better monkey with an electric chair.

Take Prof. W. Lee Lewis, for instance. Mr. Burglar, beware what you are doing to this country from Germany thirty years ago. Dr. A. E. Berling, who occupies an adjoining office, said he had been robbed three times and is tired of it. Besides being the head of the chemistry department he is the inventor of the deadly gases and high explosives used in London. Dr. Berling is now out to catch a burglar into the middle of next week and not leave enough for an autopsy, but in keeping with his civic pride, he has devised a less devastating method.

Prof. Lewis announced he has wired his home completely with a tear gas bomb burglar protective system that works with all the smoothness and dispatch of the fastest anesthetic known to medical science.

I have an electro-magnet attached to the gas bomb and wires running from the magnet to every window, door or other opening of entrance in the house. Prof. Lewis explained: "As soon as a window is raised a door opened the contact is freed and the bomb drops to the floor and explodes.

I have added a booster charge which more quickly disseminates the gas and assures that it will reach every part of the house, especially the areas close to any possibility of further questioning.

No concessions on the Ruhr, but a perfect willingness to discuss reparations after Germany has given up passive resistance—this is France's stand, botteredly said by the chief of the French delegation.

Practically beyond the possibility of further questioning.

ible. The most surprising part of the whole affair is that 98 per cent of the men at roll call did not claim they had lost an umbrella. Not one man put in a claim for it. Marvelous!" Mar-

BOY KILLED AS POLICE BUILD SPEEDERS' TRAP

County's Death Toll Now Stands at 428.

One more automobile death, that of Bernard Stegmeier, 2 years old, 4619 South St. Louis avenue, was added yesterday to Cook county's toll of motor fatalities, which now numbers a 428. Chief Collins, in an effort to ward off the alarming increase in accidents in recent days, announced he would station motorcycle police at unexpected places to trap unvarying speeders.

BERNARD STEGMEIER.—A boy was struck by an automobile driven by Charles Wozniak, 4606 North Paulina street. He had been playing in the street in front of his home, witnesses said. Wozniak was held pending the inquest today.

Driver Abandons Car.

The driver of a car bearing an Ohio license number abandoned it and fled last night after he struck another machine in Evanston, upsetting it and injuring all five occupants, one a baby, 18 months old.

The injured, who were taken to the St. Francis hospital, are Frank Harter, 7119 North Clark street; Ethel Harter, his wife; Josephine, and their baby; Charles Harter, brother of the driver, and his wife, Emma, who suffered a fracture of the leg. The others escaped with bruises and cuts.

Seek Beer Runners' Truck.

Police have doubled their efforts to apprehend the driver of an alleged beer runners' truck, which, late Monday night, fatally injured Julius Voelker, 2024 Ruble street. The truck struck Voelker as it whirled in high speed around a corner at Loomis and West 20th streets.

Chicago's plan is expected to locate an especially skillful motorist who "speeds it up" when there are policemen in sight, and slow down to lawful rate when officers are near. Motorcycle men will be stationed in secluded nooks along streets and boulevards where in the past speeding has been common. Arrests will teach this class of motorists a needed lesson, Chief Collins said.

TWENTY YEARS OF TALK TELLS TALE OF SUBWAY DELAY

Politics Big Factor in Holding Up Work.

Mayor Dunn, against the opposition of the traction companies, insisted on a requirement being put in that the companies must invest $4,000,000 in subways at any time the city requires them.

Trolley Cars Arrive.—1904.—Under Fred Busch as mayor the supplanting of the old cable cars with the trolley cars and the rehabilitation of the surface lines put subways in the background for a time, but in 1908 the agitation was renewed and a subway bureau was organized in the department of public works. Rapid transit was the great topic.

When Carter H. Harrison came in as mayor, in April of 1910, he advanced the subway plan. In July he appointed a harbor and subway committee composed of John Ericson, J. J. Reynolds, and E. C. Shrankland. In its first report in October, the commission recommended an initial subway system planned to form a link in any ultimate comprehensive system. The commission also recommended that a rapid transit system start at July 1. It looked as if subways were becoming hot stuff, and the companies promptly butted in with a proposal of a merger of the surface and elevated lines. The plan fell flat after much controversy over the valuation of the companies wanted set on their properties, but it had served its purpose.

Looking backward, many old-timers at the hall say this was one spot at which a start might have been made.

Urge $15,000,000 System.

1912.—The subway commission proposed a "comprehensive, independent subway system" to cost $125,000,000. 1913.—The city council passed the ordinance and authorized the city to "do the planning and building of the same." No specific bids were ever received. This plan was regarded as a "political subway." Its chief supporters were the "H.H." Democrats of those days. In 1914, Bion Arnold, on request of the local transportation committee, made a report on initial subway systems, which was submitted to the administration as a "dinky subway." There was much controversy between the respective advocates of the "comprehensive" and the "dinky" plans, and real subway relief was submerged in a tidal wave of political principle.

1914.—Bion J. Arnold, appointed by the transportation committee as chief subway engineer, made a report in January on a plan of a comprehensive subway system capable of unlimited expansion. It was based on the theory of a rapid transit system, the surface lines operating as feeders, which is now quite generally accepted as a basic principle.

When Carter H. Harrison came in as mayor, in April of 1910, he advanced the subway plan. In July he appointed a harbor and subway committee composed of John Ericson, J. J. Reynolds, and E. C. Shrankland. In its first report in October, the commission recommended an initial subway system planned to form a link in any ultimate comprehensive system. The plan fell flat after much controversy over the valuation of the companies wanted set on their properties, but it had served its purpose.

Another Ordinance Falls. 1915-16.—Mayor Thompson used subways as one of his campaign arguments, but that was as far as the city got toward rapid transit. In 1916 the city council appointed a traction and subway commission composed of William F. Parsons, Bion J. Arnold, and Robert Edgcomb. After exhaustive and expensive research, it prepared a traction ordinance for a unified system of surface, elevated, and subway lines. This ordinance was widely supported by civic and business organizations, but it fell afoul of city hall politics.

1918.—The traction ordinance went to a vote in November and was defeated by a majority of 24,000, the vote standing 209,852 for and 233,834 against. These were the days of the 5 cent fare political bunk, and the ordinance was defeated.

At the time Zimmerman, who is 24 years old, was seen in the lobby of the hotel and questioned for several hours to a futile attempt to break down his story of the holdup. He stuck to it and was released.

Last night detectives, after several hours' search, discovered the stolen diamonds in the bottom of a wardrobe at the house. Mrs. Zimmerman, the diamond-setter's 22 year old wife, who is soon to become a mother, fainted. The police are convinced she was ignorant of her husband's theft.

opposed by the Thompson city hall forces on the ground that the defendant committed the robbery himself, which, in fact, has never come up. The elevated lines did not warm up to the ordinance because they deemed too low a valuation was set on their properties, and the ordinance was killed by too much politics and by antagonism from the elevated lines. The surface lines were for it, but appeared to stand on their ears after it was defeated.

1918-20.—Because of the traction ordinance put a quietus on subways for a time, but the transportation committee recommended an initial subway system for both surface and elevated lines costing an estimated $34,000,000. The All Chicago council has submitted a detailed report, and last month Mayor R. F. Kelker, after much research, recommended the bill to the legislature as the basis for the hearings when the local transportation committee goes back to work in the fall.

How many spectators in a crowded courtroom ever notice the court reporter? Few, if any, members of the National Shorthand Reporters' association, in convention at the Drake hotel. "Our profession suffers from the fact that we are hidden away—in courts, in offices, in legislative bodies—and the true value of the shorthand reporter is not realized," says Horace A. Edgcomb of Boston, president of the association.

On the contrary, says Mr. Edgcomb, short-hand reporting is a profession requiring ceaseless training and the highest ability.

PHONE TIP LEADS POLICE TO CACHE OF STOLEN GEMS

If you search a house at 1022 North Moran street you'll find a lot of stolen diamonds. Some are anonymous telephone message to Acting Capt. Schaeffer at the detective bureau last night.

A check of the records disclosed that the address is that of Morton Zimmerman, a diamond-setter employed by the Fried Jeweler company in the Columbus Memorial building, who reported that on the morning of Aug. 6 at 7:30 o'clock, just after he had opened the office of the company, two armed men entered, held him up, and escaped with approximately $5,000 worth of set and uncut diamonds.

At the time Zimmerman, who is 24 years old, was seen in the lobby of the hotel and questioned for several hours to a futile attempt to break down his story of the holdup. He stuck to it and was released.

Last night detectives, after several hours' search, discovered the stolen diamonds in the bottom of a wardrobe at the house. Mrs. Zimmerman, the diamond-setter's 22 year old wife, who is soon to become a mother, fainted. The police are convinced she was ignorant of her husband's theft.

the investigation of Chicago's hanby the death of James Wright in the on Wright's death was postponed yesterday by Coroner Wolff until Judge McKinley has concluded his formal investigation which will open again in his court this morning.

The testimony of Tyrrell, the statement of Ald. M. Klein, another member of the board, the finding of blood stains on the walls where it is said that Wright was suspended, suspended instructor, had been suspended, appear to establish that there has been considerable neglect of boys at the parental home.

This has not extended generally into neglect. Physician sent to the in-

SUPPRESS VICE AS CRADLE OF CRIME—DEVER

Raids on Gaming and Resorts to Keep On.

Vigorous suppression of brothels and gambling houses is the first step toward effective crime prevention, declared Mayor Dever yesterday. Police indifference toward vice and immorality is always harbored in a crime wave, the mayor asserted, pointing to the reduction of major crime in Chicago since Chief of Police Collins detailed raiding squads to harass the dives.

Loose women MATON DEVER, and the gaming tables are instruments of crime," said the mayor. "And the man who smashes the disorderly house and the gambling joint had aimed a decided blow at crime. The vicious resort is at once the breeding place and the playground of the thug and the gunman. Where does the bandit spend his ill-gotten gains and scheme a new outrage?

Believe Crime Is Decreased.
"I am inclined to think that there is less crime in Chicago now than at any time since it became a great city, and one of the primary causes for the crime reduction is the constant searching out of these criminals' hideouts. Crime reduction hard work and periods of unemployment it is true, but with no more regularity than when the police become lax in the suppression of vice."

"The raids which Chief Collins is directing against houses of ill-repute, gambling joints, and illicit booze dispensers and which I believe, have hammered down crime of all kinds, are not spasmodic sorties to apprise reformers that steps are made in furtherance of a persistent administration policy to make Chicago as clean as it is possible to make a city of nearly 3,000,000 persons."

Planned Vice the Target.
"I have no hope that crime will ever be eliminated from our civic problems, but I do know that conscientious enforcement of all the law, with some little emphasis on the eradication of vice, will minimize crime. Every one must agree that when vice flaunts itself in the faces of decent citizens it should be suppressed."

"The raids will continue," declared Chief Collins. "And for the hint that corruption of police follows in the wake of a vice campaign, I have confidence that cooperation between Deputy Superintendent Etacek, in charge of departmental efficiency, and the civil service board will disclose who gets what and the separation from the service of the susceptible or corrupted policemen."

IGNORING GRAFT QUIZ TO BRING SHARP ACTION

Delinquent Witnesses Vex Grand Jury.

Vexed at the refusal of more than twenty men and women witnesses to appear before them to testify regarding alleged graft payments made during the Lundin-Thompson administration, members of the special grand jury last night planned drastic means for bringing in witnesses.

A dozen of subpoenas will be placed in the hands of a special corps of deputies selected for the task. Congressman Michaelson, [Walsh, Photo] notified to have his men keep watch for the persons wanted.

Jurors Are Determined.

The jurors also told Judge Michaelson to issue a subpoena for Louis L. Fisher, [Walsh, Photo] who is alleged to have won a large amount of the money some of the experts got.

Inaugurates New Plan.

"We have had subpoenas out for the men and women for several days," said Assistant Attorney General William P. MacCracken. "We are now going after men and women in different ways."

The only witness to appear last night was Al. Joseph O. Kotter of the 23d ward, who was questioned regarding fees paid to Louis L. Fisher.

AIRMAN SPEEDS WEST; EASTWARD FLIGHT DELAYED

Smith at Omaha Ahead

moments after receiving the instructions, in eastward flight for Omaha.

At the same time Pilot Allison was ordered to have his airplane in readiness to pick up the San Francisco mail from Pilot Collison who was able to penetrate the fog and reach Cheyenne.

Three Times Forced Back.

Laramie, Wyo., Aug. 21.—After Collison returned here for the second time tonight the sky cleared here and the moon came out. He reiterated his determination to make Cheyenne tonight.

"I'll make Cheyenne if it's the last thing I ever do," Collison said after landing.

Collison first passed over here at 5:02, mountain time, but returned at 5:50 p.m., nearly exhausted and with his gasoline tank nearly empty. An emergency call for gasoline brought one barrel to the landing field. This was added to the scant supply he had in the tank.

When Collison left here the second time he assumed the tank was full, but it was little more than half filled.

His return to Laramie was at 6:53 p.m. He returned to Laramie a second time at 8:05 p.m. mountain time after running into low clouds and fog east of here that made it impossible to reach Cheyenne, the next scheduled stop.

Alternate Leaves Cheyenne.

Cheyenne, Wyo., Aug. 21.—Frank Tager, Cheyenne airmail pilot, hopped off here at 8:25 p.m. mountain time, for Omaha, Neb., on the air mail service's eastward flight from coast to coast. He expected to land in Omaha, 460 miles distant, about four hours later.

Tager was to have relieved Pilot Collison, who attempted to fly from Rock Springs to Cheyenne. Collison, however, after passing Laramie, returned thrice to replenish his gasoline supply, and has not yet reached Cheyenne.

A strong head wind was blowing when Tager took off.

The 500,000-watt candle power beacon light in the aviation field here was turned on when darkness fell tonight. It will be kept burning for Collison, who expects to bring his plane to this city some time tonight, and also for the west bound mail that is scheduled to reach Cheyenne from Omaha at 4:20 o'clock tomorrow morning, mountain time.

1923 RENTS HIGHEST

1923 Rents Highest

ALTHOUGH the general cost of living in the United States is considerably lower than in 1920, rents in 1923 are at the highest average yet reached. Rents in Chicago are well above this average, and with no one predicting lower rents for desirable buildings in desirable locations, many are turning to co-operative ownership and operation of apartments as the best means of solving their housing problem.

Co-operative apartments have been successful in New York City for nearly thirty years and one New York firm alone has placed over twelve hundred families in homes of this type. Firms handling co-operative apartments in cities throughout the country, including Chicago, report that the demand far exceeds the supply. Why is the idea so popular? Because it permits one to enjoy the satisfactions of home ownership without sacrificing the conveniences of apartment life, and especially because it saves approximately half of one's rent.

The full financial advantage of co-operative ownership is realized under The Andridge Co-operative Plan. A booklet containing a full explanation of this plan, typical floor plans and a detailed price schedule will be sent on request. The display apartment which we have opened in THE ANDRIDGE, at the southeast corner of Ridge Boulevard and Church Street, Evanston, shows a fair sample of Andridge workmanship. It has been fully furnished as a model apartment by Marshall Field and Company. Hours two to eight daily and ten to eight Sundays.

DENEEN PLANS STATE TICKET; MAY LACK HEAD

SPLIT FOR SMALL MAY BE NEW LINEUP RESULT.

THEIR FIFTIETH

Mr. and Mrs. Michael Borge. Mr. and Mrs. Michael Borge will celebrate their golden wedding anniversary at their home, 1240 North Washburn avenue, tomorrow. They are natives of Bergen, Norway, being married in Chicago in 1873. Their six grandchildren and a score or more of old friends will be present at the celebration.

At this meeting, it is understood, the Deneen leaders will formulate their tentative program for 1924, as well as determine the standards they will take on the coalition question in the judicial election next November.

The present stage of affairs the Deneen leaders appear disposed to make a fight all along the line in the state and county offices next year. They are not inclined to enter any alliance that does not give them at least an even break.

They will oppose the proposed judicial coalition and even carry the fight to the Oct. 2 convention if other party leaders agree on a coalition virtually as an open threat.

Lundeen Alliance Denied.

It is believed that the Deneen crowd might enter into an alliance with Lundeen, Thompson, and Small in 1924 were it not for the fact that Judge George B. Holmes of the Municipal court has been nominated by the Deneen candidate as state attorney.

The Holmes rumors originated from inside sources, this leader said.

"It will not go so far as to say Judge Holmes will not be endorsed," he declared, "but he has received absolutely no encouragement and has never been considered thus far."

It has been taken for granted that the Deneen county slate will be built up around Recorder Joseph F. Haas and James A. Kearns, Municipal court clerks.

May Offer Third Ticket.

If the Deneen organization puts a slate ticket in the field it may not include a candidate for governor. This information must be interpreted as a peace offering on the part of some sort of alliance with the other anti-Deneen forces. Mr. Deneen, it is understood, never would agree to an open alliance with Small, but failing to make harmony with the other anti-Small candidates, might back an anti-Small candidate of his own, thus making the gubernatorial primary, a three-way fight.

Divided opposition is what Gov. Small wants. He is a boy who wants the Deneen crowd and the other Republicans to join him. The Lundeen-Thompson-Small organization is pre-dominant in its propaganda. Anti-Small leaders are hopeful, however, that the governorship will be left out of any factional conflict that might occur.

Mr. Deneen himself is understood to be undecided as ever on his own candidacy for either United States

WANTS JUDGES PICKED BY VOTE OF THE LAWYERS

Sheriff Thinks Political Chiefs Unqualified.

Political leaders are not qualified to select judges, according to Attorney Andrew R. Sheriff, speaking at the coming judicial conventions Oct. 2 and the election on Nov. 6.

The political leaders should let the lawyers do the selecting, or at least have the final word in naming the slate, if there is to be a coalition. Sheriff declares. Election to the bench once does not entitle a sitting judge to reelection necessarily, he says.

Outlines His Plan.

"The most practical way to make up a single judicial ticket for both parties," Mr. Sheriff asserts, "and the only one which could be followed, would be for the party leaders to submit lists of thirty or forty candidates for nomination from each party for a vote of preference to the whole body of lawyers of the county. From those receiving the preferential votes the ticket could be made up. The process can be performed in this instance, as in the past, through local associations of lawyers. These lawyers, the country, acting as well informed body of advisers to the public, are the best qualified to make recommendations of fitting judges and of their fellow members of the bar to constitute such a single judicial ticket."

"Ability and purity on the bench are of utmost importance in maintaining our government. It cannot be taken for granted that a man who has been on the bench for several years, that he is well qualified for the position. Experience has often demonstrated that the reverse is true."

"The system, in addition to being a good one, can be regarded as a good investment, for it can always be sold for more than it cost," he said today, as he bade them farewell as they sailed on their honeymoon trip to Europe. "It will be years before the elephant grows up, and as the animals live for several hundred years, it will be in the family for four or five generations."

Whole System Faulty.

"Our whole system of selecting Judges is faulty. It is not patterned for the selection of candidates for their judicial qualifications so much as for their political skill. Consequently it should be supplemented with all possible aid to provide the bench with capable judges."

"The Democratic and Republican leaders are proposing a coalition ticket to be made up by agreement and to include all the twelve sitting judges of the bench, who terms are about to expire. This is claimed to be justified on the ground that they are already on the bench. But that is not sufficient. Their reelection could be justified only as they may have made good in their capacity as judges on the bench. Mere sitting earns nothing but their salaries. Their right to priority for reelection should depend on the qualifications they have proven. Under our present system the voters should have a chance to say whether they think any sitting judge has or has not made good."

Party Leaders' Proposal.

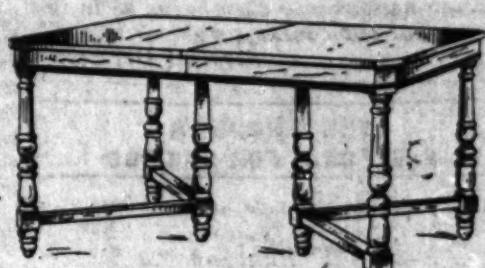

"There are eleven other places to be filled, eight on the Superior and three on the Circuit bench. These, the party leaders talk of dividing between themselves to fill at their own pleasure, so make only one ticket of the whole body of twenty-three places to be

Regular Price $395.00 Sale Price $295.00

YOU notice that we always say "good furniture." We want you to know that we have no other furniture here.

That's one thing we take care of first; Scholle quality is the primary requirement when we buy; because we have put ourselves on record in a guarantee of satisfaction to our customers; if you're not satisfied, return the goods and get your money back.

Nothing less than best quality would stand that guarantee; if we sold poor stuff we'd expect to get a lot of it back; and it isn't any fun selling goods and then taking them back. We have to sell good quality.

The prices are always pretty low, considering quality; we'd rather sell a lot of goods at a smaller margin of profit than a few at larger margin. And just now during our sale we've marked our low prices lower.

OUR FUTURE IN THE AIR.

The aerial maneuvers of twenty-three United States army airplanes, including sixteen huge bombers, which made the flight from Virginia to Maine—300 miles in eight and a half flying hours—gave the residents of half the Atlantic seaboard a thrill and a valuable object lesson. It is more or less incidental that it gave the army aviators some valuable practice in aerial maneuvers. It is more important that it should bring the lessons and needs of aviation home to the many millions of Americans who did not personally witness the spectacle.

To the minds of those of us who still get some thrill from the sight of a lone flying machine winging its solitary way above city or prairie, the thought of a group of twenty-three such machines in military formation is inspiring. Compare the latter spectacle with one of France's 140 squadrons in flight, or with England's growing aerial armada, and we may begin to realize our deficiency.

Commander Owsley of the American Legion wants to lessen that deficiency by calling upon world powers for limitation of aerial armaments. Ted G. Landis, Chicago's ace, and chairman of the American Legion aviation committee, on the other hand, pleads for further development of both commercial and military aviation in this country. He says, wisely we believe, that such development is necessary if we are to maintain our world standing politically and commercially. Between the two it is easy to subscribe to the policy of Ted Landis as the logical and practical one. Few but dreamers would expect France willingly to abandon her supremacy in the air, or Great Britain to restrict her aerial development. We cannot hope to attain that. We can take steps, at comparatively little cost, to see that we are not distanced in such development.

Among such steps are the experiments in night flying now under way in the postoffice department. A transcontinental serial mail schedule of not more than thirty hours from coast to coast is a practical goal in more ways than one. It will teach night flying, one of the essentials of military aviation, and at the same time provide the quickest postal service we have ever enjoyed. That is advancement. It should be continued and expanded wherever and whenever possible.

Americans have some great advantages in this field. Eighty-three per cent of all the motors in the world are in this country. We produced the airplane and are steadily developing great inventive geniuses who will improve it. Hundreds of thousands if not millions of our young men are expert automobile drivers and mechanics. A great many of them are potential aviators who would be easily and quickly trained to high skill in the air. All that we need is public interest and support of such development. The science of aviation, whether commercial or military, is worthy of that support.

FARMERS' PROSPECTS AND COMPLAINTS.

Secretary of Agriculture Wallace predicts that "acute agricultural problems will develop one after the other," unless the "distorted relationship between prices of farm products and prices of other commodities" is corrected. If not retarded by foolish politics, it will be corrected. Although the situation of the one crop wheat farmer is acute, the general trend of agricultural commodities is up. December wheat closed Monday at $1.04½, as against $1.02½ a year before; May wheat at $1.09½, as against $1.01½; September corn 82½¢, against 59½¢; December corn 64½¢, against 54½¢; May corn 66½¢, against 57½¢; September oats 37½¢, against 31½¢; December oats 39½¢, against 25½¢; May oats 41½¢, against 37½¢. Barley also is higher, rye lower, than a year ago.

Comparative prices in live stock also show gains. Hogs sold Monday at $7 to $7.75, as against $6.50 to $7.50 a month ago. A year ago they were selling at $7.50 to $2.5. In a month they have made up about half the distance that then separated prices from a year ago. Beef steers a month ago were $8.50 to $10.75. Monday $9 to $12.40, a year ago $9 to $10.60. Sheep a year ago were $12.40 to $13. Monday they were $13 to $13.90.

The farmers of the United States have been going through an ordeal. Secretary Wallace says thousands will go bankrupt with wheat selling below the cost of production, and thousands more will be able to hold on only by the most grinding economy. But business has had to pass through an ordeal also. Thousands of business men went bankrupt and thousands more held on only by the most drastic economy. Overproduction, inflation of values, mistakes in business judgment, and the effect of a tremendous economic convulsion which has gone to the foundations of world production, consumption, and exchange, have swept us all through an experience which has been and is painful and costly.

Just now agriculture seems not to have made as great an advance toward normal conditions as most other industries. Some students of conditions would predict that the immediate prospects of agriculture are better than those of certain other industries, which need not be specified. Business men, heavily taxed as they are and struggling with high prices for labor and material, just as the farmer is, cannot help resenting the assumption that agriculturists alone have had troubles or alone have serious problems to solve now. They cannot help resenting the political radicalism of agrarian discontent, in which they see no real help for agriculture but a good deal of injury to themselves and the whole country. They know that the last congress concentrated on agricultural relief and passed every bill demanded by responsible farming representation. They know that a special government agency, the War Finance corporation, was kept in operation for the emergency and advanced millions to meet the credit needs of agriculture in deflation pending the establishment of the liberal permanent credit agencies enacted by the new laws. They know that the farmers' difficulties have occupied the center of the stage for two years or more, and that every reasonable effort, not to speak of some effort not reasonable, has been made to put agriculture where we all want it to be, on as firm a basis of prosperity as any industry and if possible on a firmer one.

Reviewing these facts and observing that efficient agriculture is being gradually restored and that readjustments in its favor are fairly in prospect, business men and the nonfarming class generally cannot help resenting the charge advanced by politicians who prosper by agricultural discontent that the farmer is a victim of a conspiracy to oppress him and of special conditions of injustice for which there is the remedy in radical political action that threatens restoration and the prosperity of business generally.

Politicians of the Brookhart-Magnus Johnson type, in our opinion, are injuring the credit of sound, sane agriculture in this country. The way to stability of prosperity for the farmer is through the study and mastery of the economic conditions which govern his industry and not through political action that threatens restoration and the prosperity of business generally.

On Aug. 9, 10, 11, and 12 there were no such killings. About this time the traffic authorities were using unusual vigor in trying to protect the streets. Restless drivers were being sent to cells and there was considerable publicity given to the instances in which the punishment had been more severe than usual.

We believe that in the impression made by the display of names and pictures of victims and in the impression made by more vigorous law enforcement can be found the cause of the four days which were free from automobile deaths. For a short period there was a pause in the pace which is killing so many people. It was only a pause. From Aug. 13 to Aug. 21 twenty-six people were killed and THE TRIBUNE's clock was on its way again.

We believe there was a reason for the four days which were free from killings. It was not just by happy incident that the streets were safe. It was because the drivers and authorities were in a different mood and were taking greater precautions. The lesson has worn off. The city is back at its old practices and paying the price again. For a few days there was proof that it wasn't necessary. It's time to revive that period and make it longer. That ought to be the normal and not the abnormal condition.

As a rule, when an Englishman can act, he knows better than to waste that invaluable talent on the stage; so that in England an actor is mostly a man who can act well enough to be allowed to perform anywhere except in a theater. In France, an actor is a man who has not common-sense enough to behave naturally. . . .

THESE are something appropriate, pertinent, topical in this extract from an essay by Shaw written in 1897:

"As a rule, when an Englishman can act, he knows better than to waste that invaluable talent on the stage; so that in England an actor is mostly a man who can act well enough to be allowed to perform anywhere except in a theater. In France, an actor is a man who has not common-sense enough to behave naturally. . . ."

OPTIMISTIC VIEWS OF EUROPE.

Two of the men in the country best equipped to understand economic conditions now prevailing in Europe, Andrew Mellon, secretary of the treasury, and Mr. Bush, president of the New York chamber of commerce, coincide in a judgment which ought to impress American opinion. We have commented on Mr. Bush's report, given after a survey of nineteen of the principal countries of Europe, and in yesterday's TRIBUNE published Mr. Mellon's similar conclusion. It is in short that economic conditions are improving, and that American intervention, at this stage, at any rate, is not desirable. He believes that the prospect is cheering, with crops better in France, no noticeable unemployment and money plentiful, while in England unemployment is less than it has been, and though the British are apprehensive over the trade outlook because of the German situation, Mr. Mellon believes the reparations muddle will be cleared up. He does not believe the Germans will fall into revolution, relying upon their genius for organization and constructive force.

This optimistic view shared by two very able men is contrary to that of some other equally able American observers, but we believe it is supported by certain powerful forces which are likely to be forgotten in times of stress. One of the most important of these is the restoration of manpower. We must remember that war wastage stopped five years ago, and a generation has come into productive activity. The boy of 15 who was not in the armies of the war is now 20 and at work. The wastage which disastrously depletes manpower is long continued, like the 30 years' war, which run through several generations of youth. The wastage of the late war was severe, but the reservoir of human energy has been filling up and a new generation of workers has brought their productivity into European economics.

Man power is the most important factor in reconstruction and restoration, and undoubtedly its revival is playing a part in European affairs which is overlooked in our concern over the violent discontents of its political surface.

Editorial of the Day

WHEAT.

(The Bredon's Gazette.)

Wheat is destined long to remain one of our major farm crops, but it would pay us to quit growing it on millions of acres which yield poorly, and to abridge its production in every case where it has hitherto been the chief, if not only, cash crop. As wheat growers we are obliged to compete with growers in many other surplus wheat growing nations. It were better for us in the long run to import than to export wheat. Agriculturally, we should be better off with an inadequate domestic production than with a surplus.

We have exported as wheat billions of dollars' worth of soil fertility, which has not been replaced. The fundamental "capital stock" of the country has been dissipated to that extent. If the present flight of wheat growers, however distressing it may be, shall induce or compel us to curb this wanton sale of our national birthright for foreign gold, we may think of it some day as a "blessing in disguise."

But yesterday we clapped their hands
And heard their semi-tones;
Tonight they dwell in distant lands;
And all their names are Jones.

They tell of homelands far away:
The sergeant notes them down . . .
Perchance they lie in Old Cathay;
At least, they're out-of-town!

They had not sought this way-side hall
For futile games of chance;
They came for wholesome festival—
For rustic song and dance.

Their kith and kin come hastening in
To bairn them from their cells—
Their kin and kith (whose names are Smith, Though all, it seems, are swells);

And these assist their getaway
With kind, convenient loans,
And waft them home (to Old Cathay?—
And all their names are Jones!)

CANT you just hear Poincaré saying it? "Owl nous n'avons pas de paix aujourd'hui."

OF the two, Baldwin is giving a better impersonation than Poincaré, by all the standards of good acting. The Frenchman has an actor's role—one like the "fat" parts Shakespear was kind enough to write for. We have always believed, a friend who lacked talent, but had to be taken care of in the Globe and Bankside casts. Marc Antony, Faulconbridge, Gratiano, Bolingbroke, Mercutio, Iago—in short, the blackguards with which the comedies, histories, and chronicles are strewed. The comedy of these rôles is made up of lines of learned speech.

ANTONY has a glorious part in the great play in which Poincaré is disporting; he's high on a platform above the crowd, his waving arms outlined against the sky, and the sunapes are to follow. Listen in, and you'll hear him in the easy, obvious paraphrase of the funeral-oration:

"I am not orator, Baldwin is.
But, as you know me, a plain, blunt man:
I only speak right on."

And on, and on, and on . . . The beauty of his rôle lies in its being so rich that anybody might play it; and that is the character of the big parts in the French theater.

THESE are something appropriate, pertinent, topical in this extract from an essay by Shaw written in 1897:

SPAIN PUTS ITS HOPE OF BEATING MOOR IN WEYLER(Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.) (Continued from page 1.) MADRID, Aug. 21.—Tribunes Report: Gen. Weyler has been sent to co-operate with the military. One of these vessels, the Espana, has already been in action against Moorish trenches at Tifernin.

Spanish batteries at Bensfora, Tarifa, and Tetouan succeeded in dispersing concentrations of the enemy, says an official communiqué. The Moors shot down an airplane that was bombing Tifernin. Three Spanish officers and 20 men were killed. Leaves of tobacco in the air have been suspended.

The people crowded the streets and cheered Gen. Weyler as he drove from the palace this afternoon.

"Long live the bravest soldier in Spain," was one of their cries.

Three thousand troops sailed for Morocco this evening. Four artillery batteries, two battalions of infantry, and two cavalry regiments have been ordered to leave tomorrow.

Aviators who have been encamped near the rebel forces are receiving big reinforcements from the interior.

Gen. Weyler spent a week in Morocco in head of a special commission charged with organizing a plan for a new campaign. During his visit the Moors attacked and inflicted a defeat on him along the entire battle line in a few days' battle. There is still desultory fighting.

Gen. Weyler is 80 years old and does not know the legend of "man of iron" which has grown up about him; he enjoys the confidence of the people, and Mrs. Weyler, wife of Gen. Weyler, Aurora; three brothers of Oak Park, Ill., and two sons of Chicago. Gen. Weyler will be held from the hospital at 8 o'clock Wednesday morning. Dr. J. C. Brady will officiate. The service will be in West Adams.

YANKS UNCOVER ANCIENT GLORIES OF MAYA INDIANS

Restore Old Civilization in Egypt of America.

BY JOSEPH PIERSON.

(Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.)

Copyright 1923 by The Chicago Tribune.)
MERIDA, Yucatan, Aug. 21.—Dr. S. Morley, conducting the Carnegie Foundation's great restoration of the ancient Maya civilization in this Egypt of the new world, is returning to the United States after starting an army of Indians upon a project which probably will continue many years. This is the first great restoration of relics of ancient life conducted in the western hemisphere.

The Carnegie foundation has purchased several hundred acres embracing pyramids, temples, palaces, and houses of the Maya Indians, from E. H. Thompson, a Harvard man, who has spent more than thirty years in Yucatan, being American consul for more than twenty years. Devoting himself to archaeology, Mr. Thompson purchased a 10,000 acre hacienda, comprising the most ancient Maya capital, the Chichen Itza ruins, which cover a tract almost as large as Chicago.

Ruins Well Preserved.

This land is covered with an underworld which has preserved the ruins, and operations already have revealed an ancient avenue of processions and other Mayan hieroglyphics depicting the life of an artistic, energetic nation, existing centuries before the Christian era, with influences extending over the North and South American continents. Interpretation of these hieroglyphics has not yet been mastered, but Dr. Morley hopes to find some key.

Mr. Thompson, under the Carnegie agreement, has turned a great central portion of the Chichen Itza ruins over to the Carnegie foundation, and the Carnegie foundation agreed to expend $4,000 per month for the development of the property. About 500 men already have been engaged and are clearing the tract. It is expected that the picturesque history and literature of this mysterious people will be reduced to modern civilization shortly.

Professors and students are awaiting the eventual disclosure of secret methods and processes which probably will prove valuable to modern life and industry. It appears that the Maya wise men had mastered the division of time with much precision, and that it was unnecessary to have periodical corrections of terrestrial time, which the modern calendar requires.

Used Remarkable Paints.

Explorers already have discovered they the Maya used a pigment or paint which preserved its color and properties for at least 1,000 years, or longer, at least 700 years. Scientists have forwarded to the United States brilliant red, yellow, and green pigments scraped from vast colored carvings on stone friezes and facades of temples and palaces, hoping an analysis will disclose their secret for the benefit of modern markings.

The government of Mexico is energetically helping the scientific development of the ruins, laying excellent roads, and planning for American tourists fairly comfortable accommodations, which now are sadly deficient.

Mr. Morley expects to return from Chichen Itza in December, when the ancient city will be fairly well understood. The scientists, perhaps, will locate within an ancient temple which will be restored and will have cement and baths.

Prisoner's Dope Wrong, but He Was Freed Anyhow.

CITY SEEKS TO FIGHT PLEA OF DR. SADIE ADAIR

Attorneys for the city yesterday petitioned Judge Francis S. Wilson to permit them to intervene in the suit of Dr. Sadie Bay Adair, who claims she and her son, State's Attorney Crowe to institute quo warrant proceedings to restore Dr. Adair as a member of the school board. The city seeks to be made a defendant so that it may answer Dr. Adair's contentions.

Dr. Adair's resignation, tendered to Mayor Thompson's regime, was accepted by Mayor Dever with several other offices having been filled by Mayor Dever's appointees. Dr. Adair contends that her resignation was withdrawn when Thompson failed to accept it, and that Mayor Dever had no right to use it.

She demanded that State's Attorney

Crowe file an information against Miss Grace Temple, successor to Dr. Adair, to require Miss Temple to show by what right she held her office. When Mrs. Crowe refused, Dr. Adair petitioned the court to issue a mandamus against him.

Assistant Corporation Counsel Leon Hornstein and Albert H. Veeder contend that the city was an interested party and should be permitted to intervene. Attorney Chester Cleveland, counsel for Dr. Adair, said the time for the city to defend was when State's Attorney Crowe had filed the information.

Judge Wilson continued the matter until today.

EDWARD HILLMAN JR. THANKS JUDGE FOR SPEED FINE

Judge Henry Walker of the Speeder's court was the recipient of a "note of thanks" yesterday from Edward Hillman Jr., whom the judge fined $100 and costs Monday on a charge of driving his automobile seventy miles an hour.

The note said the judge had given young Hillman "good advice," and continued: "I am entirely in sympathy with your ideas on the subject of speeding."

This map shows the path of totality of the eclipse of the sun on Sept. 10, in the extreme southwest corner of California and in Mexico. The eclipse will be at one-half in Chicago and will be visible as in partial phase over most of America.

U. S. FLYERS WILL SEE SUN ECLIPSE 20,000 FEET UP

BY SELBY MAXWELL.

The war department has decided to use its equipment and personnel to assure a successful observation of the total eclipse of the sun at San Diego, Cal., on September 10.

Lieut. John A. MacReady, holder of the world altitude record in aviation, Lieut. A. W. Stevens, aerial photographer, will ascend 20,000 feet in an airplane and from this clear height will take pictures of the sun as it is obscured by the moon. It will make no difference to them if the air on the ground is cloudy. Clouds below will serve as well as solid land for a background; astronomical.

The sun will be one of the greatest celestial events of this year. The sun will be totally obscured by the moon for three and one half minutes at San Diego, and for lesser periods in the towns near by.

Total eclipses are rare and are easily observed by men of science, in addition, the sight of the blackness of midnight in the middle of the day with orange and yellow flames shooting out of the sun, and all the stars and planets visible, will be a spectacle that will attract visitors from all over the world.

Celestial cameras of huge proportions are now being set up in the zone of totality to test the Einstein theory. Others, set to catch the sun, will take pictures of the thin layers of the atmosphere, and of that mysterious x-ray-like outer shell, the corona, whose streamers sometimes reach the earth to make an electrical storm. Every astronomer will be on the alert for new comets and new stars, which may be so near the sun that they cannot be seen in daylight.

Explorers already have discovered they the Maya used a pigment or paint which preserved its color and properties for at least 1,000 years, or longer, at least 700 years. Scientists have forwarded to the United States brilliant red, yellow, and green pigments scraped from vast colored carvings on stone friezes and facades of temples and palaces, hoping an analysis will disclose their secret for the benefit of modern markings.

The government of Mexico is energetically helping the scientific development of the ruins, laying excellent roads, and planning for American tourists fairly comfortable accommodations, which now are sadly deficient.

Mr. Morley expects to return from Chichen Itza in December, when the ancient city will be fairly well understood. The scientists, perhaps, will locate within an ancient temple which will be restored and will have cement and baths.

Prisoner's Dope Wrong, but He Was Freed Anyhow.

FIRPO IS JOINED BY MILLIONAIRE LATIN TRAINER

New York, Aug. 21.—Horatio Lavalle, millionaire Argentine sportsman and patron of Luis Angel Firpo, arrived today from Buenos Aires to take charge of the South American pugilist for his match with Jack Dempsey at the Polo grounds Sept. 14.

Señor Lavalle, accompanied by the several other ring enthusiasts from the pampas, was met by Firpo. After a short conference with Tex Rickard, promoter of the championship match, Lavalle and Firpo departed for Atlantic City, where the challenger has established quarters. Active workouts will be started tomorrow, it was said.

Says Firpo Will Win Easly.

"I have never seen Dempsey fight. I have studied motion pictures of him in action and have every confidence in the ability of my friend," Lavalle said. "Firpo should win easily. How quickly he will land the decisive punch. I naturally am not in the ring to see it, but I feel sure the fight will last long."

Lavalle, himself an amateur boxer of prominence in South America, and son of a wealthy and aristocratic Argentine family, declared he had made no definite plan for Firpo's training.

"That must wait until I have an opportunity to discuss these matters with Firpo," he said. "My theory of training, however, adds nothing new to what you know. It calls for hard work, good food, regular hours and proper adjustment of conditioning activity."

Highest Respect for De Forest.

Lavalle declared he held nothing but the highest respect for Jimmy De Forest, veteran American trainer discarded by Firpo after he had conditioned the South American for his fights with Bill Brennan, Jack McLaughlin, and Jess Willard.

"De Forest is an excellent trainer," Lavalle said. "I have the highest admiration for him. The primary reason is that he does not know Spanish, and Firpo, notwithstanding the presence of interpreters, is irritated and bewildered by the speaking of a foreign language. I have known Firpo for more than fifteen years. I know his weaknesses as well as his virtues in the boxing game, and think I can correct the more glaring of his defects."

More Light on Luis' Past.

The story that Firpo served an apprenticeship as druse clerk in Buenos Aires before beginning his ring career was exploded by other arrivals from the Argentine. Before Firpo took up boxing, they said, he was simply a manual laborer. He has been a stevedore, bootblack, and at one time washed bottles in a drug store whence originated the drug clerk name.

Lavalle, 28 years old, is owner of a wheat and grazing plantation near Buenos Aires. He is a college graduate and comes from one of the oldest Castilian families in the Argentine.

His grandfather was an army general.

Lavalle won the amateur light heavyweight championship of Latin America at the Brazilian Centennial exposition last year.

James Kid for Partner.

Firpo today signed two sparring partners, who will accompany him to his quarters at Atlantic City. They are Frank Koble of Brooklyn, former amateur welterweight, and Jamaican Kid, colored light heavyweight.

MILLIKIN NET STAR WINS TILT IN STATE MEET

Pearl, Ill., Aug. 21.—[Special.]—Dr. Robert Sutton, after winning one of the most brilliant sets ever seen on a Peoria court, went down to defeat yesterday in the state tennis meet, by dropping the last two sets of the match this afternoon in the state tennis tournament being held on Bradley courts. The scores were 8-10, 7-5, 6-2.

Harold L. Tucker, Peoria, had great difficulty in besting Joe Gauer, Taylorville veteran, but finally made good, winning two straight deuce sets in the second, 6-5.

Harry Haines, Decatur winner, after winning a tussle with R. New Springfield, to the count of 7-5, solved his opponent and swamped him in the second, 6-6.

Henry Doubt and Eugene McClure, Peoria, were getting the short end of the scores in the match with W. McChesney, Springfield, when rain halted activities for the day. The Peorians lost the first set, 4-4, while the second stood at 1-1 in games.

SENIA WINS AT LAKE WINNEBAGO

Nenon, Wis., Aug. 21.—Senia of the Lake Geneva Yacht club, owned by Commodore G. L. Schmidt and skippered by his son, Ernest, won a thrilling race in a heavy sea on Lake Winnebago this afternoon, finishing a scant nine seconds ahead of Kingfisher. The course was swept by a twenty-mile gale.

Thirteen of the A boats took to the lake prepared to enter the event, but Shadow, run by Jack Kimberly of Neenah, and Doris, captained by Hy Mayes of Pewaukee, capsized just as they were attempting to join the assembly for the starting gun.

Dolox III, Carl E. Steiger's new boat of Oshkosh, went over after rounding the fire buoy, and Adery III, Steve, and Will Davis' new craft got in late but capsized on the second lap.

Tomorrow's race will be for the Clark Ordway trophy, while the C boats are scheduled to race in the morning for the Howard D. Coleman cup.

Frankie Garcia Gets Win Over O'Doud at Atlanta

Atlanta, Ga., Aug. 21.—Frankie Garcia, Los Angeles featherweight, tonight was awarded a referee's decision over Tim O'Doud of Atlanta at the close of their ten round scheduled fight. Garcia outpointed O'Doud, according to the referee, in almost every round.

COLE GOES TO ALABAMA TECH

Auburn, Ala., Aug. 21.—Special.—Harry Cole of Auburn, star M. A. A. athlete received word from Alabama Physician's Institute, Auburn, Ala., that he is leaving for the fall term to continue his studies there. He has recently completed the work at the University of Michigan in Ann Arbor. Cole is a football coach in charge at Auburn and head baseball coach in 1920.

SMITTY—STEALING SMITTY'S STUFF!

WILLS TO FIGHT FIRPO ONLY AS CHAMPION

New York, Aug. 21.—Tex Rickard announced today that he had signed Luis Angel Firpo to fight Harry Wills in Argentina next April, regardless of the outcome of his title match with Jack Dempsey at the Polo Grounds Sept. 14, and shortly thereafter Paddy Mullins, who looks after the interests of the colored scrapper, declared he "wouldn't even think of signing up with the South American unless the latter took the title away from Dempsey."

"That must wait until I have an opportunity to discuss these matters with Firpo," he said. "My theory of training, however, adds nothing new to what you know. It calls for hard work, good food, regular hours and proper adjustment of conditioning activity."

Highest Reward for De Forest.

Lavalle declared he held nothing but the highest respect for Jimmy De Forest, veteran American trainer discarded by Firpo after he had conditioned the South American for his fights with Bill Brennan, Jack McLaughlin, and Jess Willard.

"De Forest is an excellent trainer," Lavalle said. "I have the highest admiration for him. The primary reason is that he does not know Spanish, and Firpo, notwithstanding the presence of interpreters, is irritated and bewildered by the speaking of a foreign language. I have known Firpo for more than fifteen years. I know his weaknesses as well as his virtues in the boxing game, and think I can correct the more glaring of his defects."

More Light on Luis' Past.

The colored fighter's manager declared he had received no word from Rickard concerning the proposed match nor had he heard anything about it, except through the newspapers.

He stated he would not consider the plan announced by Rickard of signing two contracts, one to hold in case Firpo gained the championship and one for use if he lost.

Not Surprised—Tex.

Tex Rickard when told of Mullins' statement said he was not surprised.

"I've been offering Wills a fight with Firpo for months past," said Rickard. "I wanted some assurance from which him. I wanted to have the two men meet to decide which should stand up against Dempsey, but Mullins refused. Now I am offering him a chance to fight Firpo, win or lose. If Firpo loses his fight with Dempsey Wills will have a chance to fight him in the Argentine. If Firpo wins he will have the assurance of Mullins that he has the assistance of Wills."

Rickard stated he was in no hurry and very likely would not put the matter up to Mullins until after the fight on Sept. 14.

Tom O'Rourke Quits

New York, Aug. 21.—Tom O'Rourke, veteran boxing promoter, today resigned as promoter and matchmaker of the Polo Grounds Athletic club. O'Rourke, 44, announced he had taken over active management of the club and appointed Frank Flournoy, matchmaker at Madison Square Garden, to the same job at the Polo grounds.

Under the new régime two championship contests already have been scheduled, the middleweight title between Eddie Flynn and Harry Greh, A. S. 1, and the heavyweight championship battle between Jack Dempsey and Luis Angel Firpo Sept. 14.

Stages Three Title Bouts.

Three championship bouts were held at the grounds under O'Rourke's direction—the engagement in which Johnny Kilbane lost his featherweight title to Eugenio Criqui, the contest in which Pancho Villa won the world's heavyweight crown from Jimmy Wilde, and

Dempsey Up to Old Tricks; Puts Camp Mates on Shelt

BY HARRY NEWMAN.

White Sulphur Springs, N. Y., Aug. 21.—[Special.]—Business of knocking off sparring partners threatens a serious situation at Jack Dempsey's training camp. When the roll was called yesterday, Paddy Mullins, who looks after the interests of the colored scrapper, declared he "wouldn't even think of signing up with the South American unless the latter took the title away from Dempsey."

INSTALLMENT XXXIII

JACQUELINE RECEIVES A SHOCK.

"Why, madame?"
"Why not?"
"I am so far as I am concerned, only because he told me he wishes to see me again." He has asked no question.
Jacqueline's hand fell to the red plush.

"You know how my husband died. He was murdered."

"Please tell Mr. Skiddy's son and tell him I wish to see him because I want to ask him something about—the murder of my husband."

Louise Guyard's eyes grew quite green, like a cat's. They did not blink, and Jacqueline's hysterical fancy told her that a cat must have blinked in the strong, harsh light.

"Do you think he murdered Lord Montore, madame?"

"I think he may have conspired to do so," said Jacqueline simply. "Will you take me to him, please?"

Louise did not move. She regarded Jacqueline steadily out of unblinking green eyes.

"It is quite possible," she said. "He would do anything—anything he wished, because he is a think. I have asked no questions, but I have had my thoughts, and I have read carefully all that the papers say about the case. And then, there is the way Aunt Hilda has behaved. Why should my husband, do you think?"

"I think—Jacqueline clasped and unclasped her hands—"that the intention was not to kill him, but to make him helpless and then to take his place. I have read of such things. Mrs. Skiddy told me he is very like my husband. The deception was quite possible, for my husband had few acquaintances and no friends at all; and he and I—we saw so little of each other that for a time at least, it would have been easy."

"You think he came to the house, disguised, under the name of Thurlow?"

"No! No! Thurlow is—" Jacqueline bit her lip. "Thurlow, I think, was his confederate. Thurlow got to know his secret and found out all about him, and how easy it would be to take his place. He was in a position to know all about Mr. Skiddy's son and his likeness to my husband. Thurlow planned everything, it was he who was to get my husband away somewhere and end my husband. It was he, I think, who went too far and actually killed my husband."

"Yes. And so they threw the body down the lift shaft and got away, back to the place he thought safest? H'm. Yes, it is all plausible."

"You—you will let me see him now?"

Louise, still motionless, looked up.

"O, no," she said, almost with surprise. "You and your plain clothes max outside, you will not make such easy use of me. It is true, my friend for him is—over. But not because he has planned to rob a man, or even to kill a man. Because I have chosen to marry, and so the other is finished. But I do not give him to the law because you have a theory, madame."

"They are Mr. Kean coming back," urged Jacqueline hurriedly. "Miss Guyard, you misunderstand me. I don't want to give him up to the police. I don't care what becomes of him. I want to ask him—if you must know—all I want to ask him is whereabouts of Thurlow. And I don't want to give him up to the police either. I want him to prove his innocence."

"He was in the grave tones of the doctor—"I really think, Lady Montore, that every effort should be made to bring the poor old lady's husband here as soon as possible. Leonie sat unstrung.

"I have asked no questions," she said. "and—it is finished now. My Falcon told me he was going tonight. He may be already gone."

And then from outside there came Mr. Kean's foolish squeak:

"Hello—Skiddy, where are you slipping off to? Wanted to see me about something, did t'you? And there's a lady come, Lady Montore by name. You know—the Montore case?" The voice dropped and became inaudible.

Leonie looked at Jacqueline.

"My poor Hector has proved disastrous," she said. "I felt that he would."

She rose. "Come on, Leonie."

"I am sorry to tell you that the dream was closing in upon her. The solid foot of the door was a surprise, the cooler air of the hall a strange actality. The door of the house was half open and she could see the back of a man on the path. Mr. Kean's spectacles were between the man and the gate. Jacqueline stepped out on to the path and went down towards the two of them."

The man turned and the light from the hall showed his face to Jacqueline. She stood rigid, while the dream crashed down upon her and broke into a reality more fantastic, more hideous, more volcanic than any she had ever known.

Behind her she heard a voice she knew to be Leonie's.

"Good boy, my Falcon."

"What's that?" asked Mr. Hector Kean. He took off his spectacles and wiped them.

"We had better all go back into the house," said Julian Thayne.

Mr. Kean was still wiping his spectacles when they had all four repaired the house and Leonie had closed the door. He wished very much that he was not obliged to wear spectacles. They detracted from one's appearance; they interfered with one's creation of one's atmosphere.

Mr. Kean had not long been thinking about the atmosphere he created, and therefore he thought about it acutely. Leonie's love had made him aware of himself as he had never been aware before. He had handled with amazing skill the Maude Simpson problem. He had—figuratively speaking—taken Leonie by the hair preparatory to dragging her off to his cave, where, for the rest of her life, she would attend to his wants, keep him aware of himself, and have his mother to stay. He had come to the conclusion that he must now have her smooth as silk. Lady Montore's embarrassment and Leonie's awkwardness had given to it that young Skiddy did not miss the opportunity of a chat with a countess. Not that a countess was better than any one else. If a title had to be accounted for, some would be hard put to it to prove that they deserved it. Still, a countess didn't come calling every day of the week.

It was odd that young Skiddy had made such a point to Leonie not seeing any one. No doubt his likeness to the dear Earl Montore had caused a lot of trouble, but there was no sense in being too sensitive. If it hadn't been for a chance encounter, Skiddy might have left the house without knowing that Lady Montore had called purposely to give him a message from his mother.

"It was quite all right about your chauffeur, Lady Montore," he said. "While getting up and down the stairs, he had to step over the plain clothes man at the foot of the stairs. So far as I could judge, they hadn't had a word. Very unpleasant when servants get talking with strangers, isn't it?"

He was interrupted by that little laugh of Leonie's he never could understand. Slightly offended, he put on his spectacles, and stared at her. She had gone into the sitting room and seated herself in the place she had occupied before. That seemed a little strange, because if Lady Montore wanted to speak privately to young Skiddy she would have to do it in the kitchen. They all went into the sitting room.

Mr. Kean transferred his stare to Lady Montore. She was standing by the chair in which she had been sitting, leaning rather heavily against the back of it as though she were in need of its support. She looked exhausted, and she also looked Mr. Kean searched for the word and could find it. He referred to himself with supposing the young Skiddy's likeness to the late Lord Montore had been more appealing than she had bargained for. She looked up at him, and for a moment he was reminded of Maude Simpson. Maude had looked up at him like that when he had told her that everybody had got to live his own life.

"Thank you very much, Mr. Kean," said Lady Montore. "I—it is, as you say, very unpleasant."

Mr. Kean nodded his acceptance of her thanks with as much sang froid as if she were not a countess and wealthy and beautiful. For Mr. Kean was conscious of her beauty, although it was not of the style he really admired. He had a bit of color, and Lady Montore was so very fair. Her hair was so golden that, in contrast with the close, dark mottling that she wore, it was almost white, like an old woman's hair. But her face was young and full.

Again Mr. Kean furnished in vain for the word.

Up from the "Torchy" comedies comes Johnny Hines to play the title role in the cinema version of George Cohan's musical comedy stage success. And clever work he does in it. But, while giving him all the credit in the world, he's got to fall pretty hard to keep an audience from liking a picture with a good horse race in it—and there is sure a good horse race in "Little Johnny Jones."

As a matter of fact the whole story's a cock-and-doodle. Mr. Jones is a jockey who has made spectacular and highly successful rides on one Yankee Doodle. Yankee Doodle is sold to a sporting English earl and for a time it looks like Johnny and his pony are about to be parted forever. But the sporting earl is a wise fellow and engages Mr. Jones to ride for him.

A horse racing story wouldn't be really good, you know, without some complications and a beautiful girl to complicate matters. Both you discover in "Little Johnny Jones."

The picture is pretty well directed and acted; not so well photographed. The makeup of the players is rotten. Also Tuesday and Wednesday are the same as Wednesday in the subtitles. As to the subtitles themselves, they are all right.

The opulence of which I was one for a long, long time—that McVicker's program is going to kill me some day—seemed to enjoy the picture thoroughly.

"The Romance of the Republic" is a series to be issued by National Motion Pictures, Inc. The idea is to show the layman the various activities of the government. There will be eleven reels. It is thought that government officials will cooperate.

Hurry Your Letters
Boys and Girls, for Sally's Next Party

BY SALLY JOY BROWN

Why do you like amusement parks? Boys and girls! Do you know all the fun you'll have if you win an invitation to my White City party? Just think, children, of all the things there are to do at an amusement park! We'll take the rides, see the shows, everything, and do you know White City has the only cyclone bowls in the United States? So hurry along your letter if you wish to be a prime winner.

Tell me why you like amusement parks and mail your letter immediately. I choose the winners on Thursday, and I want your letter to reach me on or before Thursday noon.

I'm printing a couple of the letters that have won invitations:

"Dear Sally: I like amusement parks because they are such a novelty and change from winter recreations. There are so many rides, too, that if a person does not like one there are others to choose from. It is so much fun to go with a large party to an amusement park—the more the merrier. I've heard of your parties, Sally, so know I'll have a wonderful time if I'm lucky enough to win.—H. C. S."

"How are you today, Miss Joy? I'm sure you must be feeling wonderful to be able to give such a nice invitation to all my children. Do you know, like amusement parks, there's nothing I do any other kind of entertainment! I'll certainly have a lot of joy if I can go with you on Friday, Aug. 31. The shoot the chutes is my idea of thrill, but I think all the shows are great. Altogether, it's a jolly good mixture. If I win, I certainly would like to tell the girls when I go back to school.—A Very Hopeful Girl!"

New, won't it be great to be one of the hundred happy boys and girls! Well, then, send me your letter now and watch Sunday's paper for the winners.

A FRIEND IN NEED

BY SALLY JOY BROWN

Little Girl Is Shut-In.

"Would anybody be so kind as to lend a stereoscope and some pictures for my little girl, who is a shut-in and has been sick with a fever for several months and cannot get out anywhere? She has been in all summer and I have nothing to amuse her. We would be ever so grateful for the help."

Hans F. A.

Probably you have one of these old-fashioned contrivances, with views from different parts of the country and even abroad in your attic. If so, won't you look it up and let this little sick child have the benefit of the pleasure and instruction it would give her?

Veteran Asks Help.

"I am a patient at a sanitarium here, and am crippled and in poor health. I am in need of a suit of clothes, coat size about 40 and trousers 36 or 38. I could use a pair of shoes size 7. I was in the war of 1898-1901, and saw active service in the Philippines, but so far have failed to receive any pension. Probably some of my comrades or friends can help me to secure a discarded suit or shoes, good enough to wear out here."

"Isn't it a suit with a little wear left in it that you could part with for this veteran?"

Dance Frock Reflecting Spanish Inspiration

by Mary Olmori Howell

NEW YORK.—(Special Correspondence.)—New party styles are peppered with periods. This apparently is the only modern note about them. The splendors of Italian, French and Spanish courts at their highest are to be ours. We have only to choose which to court.

We have been clad in cloth of gold and cloth of silver at parties for some seasons now, but the line has been straight and sheathlike or draped. Now we are to spread out skirts like Spanish infantas or duchesses of the Italian renaissance, and goodness knows where we are to get the manner that went with such clothes. Spanish royal ladies had no legs, you will remember. If so, what are we to do with the new silver green chiffon hose fifth avenue is mad about, and the sunburnt skin tones of the day?

The color suggestion of the new period fashions is reflected today in a silver cloth dance frock of Spanish inspiration. There is little new about the dipped sides except their lining of gorgeous rose, but I'll wager you never saw such rose embroidery and such a wealth of embroidered and silver fringed scalloping outside of a picture or when Carmenita danced. That will be us the coming winter.

24 VIOLATORS OF WAR LAWS MAY GET CLEMENCY

Coolidge to Study Cases of Those Still in Prison.

(BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.) Washington, D. C., Aug. 21.—[Special]—President Coolidge intends to extend a "reasonable degree of clemency" to persons still in prison for violation of war time laws, the so-called political prisoners.

This was disclosed at the White House today following the meeting of the President with his cabinet.

Mr. Coolidge holds that no man should be imprisoned for an opinion which he may hold, and has been gratified to learn that no person was convicted during the war for the mere holding of an opinion. When, however, persons commit overt acts in violation of the laws they merit punishment, in the opinion of the President.

Harding Liberated Many.

President Harding commuted the sentences of Eugene V. Debs and more than 100 others imprisoned for violation of war time laws after the four such prisoners remain. They comprise chiefly the California group.

As these men have been in prison several years Mr. Coolidge intends to review their cases and to release those who in his opinion merit clemency. Mr. Harding declined to commute the sentences of the twenty-four because of the character of their crime.

Secretary of Treasury Mellon's report on European conditions, submitted yesterday, taken in connection with the reports of other administration observers abroad, has convinced the President that no change in American foreign policy is warranted at this time.

Foreign Entanglements.

In view of the difficulties involved in Europe there is nothing America can do, it was stated authoritatively, but to follow the course now being pursued by the British administration, which aims to aid the rehabilitation of Europe to the full extent possible without entangling the United States in trans-Atlantic bolls and political intrigue. The President stands ready to appoint an American member of an international commission to survey the ability of Germany to pay reparations if the allies should invite the United States to participate in this manner.

The Secretary of the Treasury, the fiscal tariff provisions of the Fordney-McCumber act, President Coolidge has arrived at no settled policy. He intends to make full use of the tariff commission and doubts that tariff administration could be expedited by the creation of a tariff adjustment board.

The President contemplated calling a conference of governors on the enforcement of prohibition as soon as Prohibition Commissioner Haynes returns from his vacation.

MEXICO AND U. S. TO CLASP HANDS SOON, IS RUMOR

(Washington, D. C., Aug. 21)—[Special]—President Coolidge expects to receive from the state department shortly, it was stated at the White House today, recommendations on the report which was submitted to him and to Secretary Hughes yesterday by the Mexican commissioners John Barton-Payne, American commissioners who had just returned from their conference in Mexico City with the Mexican representatives. The President will act on the question of recognition of the Oregon government.

Despite the fact that neither at the White House nor in the state department could confirmation be obtained of published reports that President Coolidge already has approved the recommendations, and that recognition is now merely a question of technical procedure, a feeling of optimism was apparent.

R. B. Creager, who has been most instrumental in the negotiations with the Mexican post, was again a visitor at the White House today. Mr. Creager is chairman of the Republican state committee in Texas. It was generally understood that the late President Harding had determined upon Mr. Creager for the post and that Mr. Creager would be acceptable to the Oregon government.

U. S. TRADE BOARD BARS PRICE LISTS OF TYPOTHECÆ

Controls Printing Cost, Is Federal Charge.

Washington, D. C., Aug. 21.—The United Typothetæ of America, with headquarters at Chicago, was ordered today by the federal trade commission to discontinue certain practices which the commission declared would enable employing printers to maintain standard prices for commercial printing. The typothetæ, composed of branch and affiliated organizations throughout the country, was told by the commission to control more than 50 per cent of the commercial printing in the United States.

An investigation by the commission, according to its announcement, showed that the order against the typothetæ, developed that no man should be imprisoned for an opinion which he may hold, and has been gratified to learn that no person was convicted during the war for the mere holding of an opinion. When, however, persons commit overt acts in violation of the laws they merit punishment, in the opinion of the President.

Followed by All Members.

The price list, the commission charged, is compiled by the "price lists committee" of the typothetæ, and its form is used by members who follow the rules and regulations in finding cost.

The commission found further that if all printers using this system adopted the prices "unmistakably set forth" in the loose leaf sheets furnished by the typothetæ, all would arrive at the same price for the same character of printing.

The commission's order specifically prohibits typothetæ from the following practices:

"1. Conducting its system of education in principles and methods of cost accounting in such way as to suggest any uniform percentage to be included in selling price as profit or otherwise by members or others using such system of cost accounting.

Told to Stop Propaganda.

"2. Requiring or receiving from members and others using respondents' uniform cost accounting system identified and identified as typothetæ, printed matter for the purpose of calculating average, normal, or standard costs of production and from publishing them to members and the trade generally as a 'standard price list' or 'standard guide' association cost or price list under any other name.

"3. Compiling and publishing for use by members and others in the same trade, average, normal, or standard production costs with instructions or suggestions for the translation of such standard costs into selling prices under the name of 'standard price list' or 'standard guide' or any other name."

GMC Trucks Increase The Radius of Profitable Trucking

The utility of any motor truck is limited by its ability to travel steep grades and bad roads.

GMC Trucks, because of the famous GMC Two-Range Transmission, can operate profitably over roads impassable to other trucks.

They have a volume of surplus power that takes them wherever wheels can get traction. Yet this extra pulling ability brings no additional cost to their operation.

The radius of GMC trucks has practically no limit and the profits of GMC hauling are therefore greatly increased.

LEGION NOTES

The Illinois Soldiers, Sailors, and Marines' Relief and Aid Society will give a party for the benefit of wounded, tubercular, and disabled veterans tomorrow night, at 8 o'clock in the restaurant of the Municipal pier.

At a meeting of Theodore Roosevelt post No. 627 of the American Legion at the Hamilton club the following delegates were elected to attend the state convention in Danville Sept. 17 and 18: W. F. Metheny, John G. Little Jr., Albert E. Johnson, and H. E. Linton, Jr. The alternates are Carl H. Woodbridge, Joseph H. Dubois, John B. Morgan, and Elmer Erickson.

Relief for the overcrowded conditions at Lake View High school was asked yesterday by a committee representing practically all business organizations in the city.

What plan was made before Superintendent of Schools Peter A. Mortenson.

With a normal capacity of 1,500, the high school is expected to accommodate more than 2,000 pupils, the committee asserts, and the overcrowding leads to poor scholarship.

It has been necessary to work the school on the double shift system, part of the pupils attending school in the morning, and the others in the afternoon, losing one-half of the students a half day out of school. This practice is detrimental, the committee claims, and results in poorer work being done by the students.

Supt. Mortenson admitted that Lake view was probably the most overcrowded high school in the city, and indicated that he would welcome suggestions for the alleviation of the situation.

SEPTEMBER CORN HITS NEW HIGH ON HEAVY TRADING

BY CHARLES MICHAELS.

Trade in the corn pit of the board of trade yesterday was the most active in many weeks, with September soaring to a new high for the crop, as shorts, commission houses and local bulls all took a hand on the buying side. The September delivery had a range of 4 1/4c for the day, the peak price being 8 5/8c, and the close about 1 1/4c under that figure. The market can be expected to move with the price of the host product.

Deferred corn contracts did not show much strength, but rallied briskly at times, closing 4 1/4c higher, while the September closed 2 1/4c 2 3/4c higher.

The upheaval in corn prices and the forecast for lower temperatures and possible frosts in western Canada lifted wheat moderately, with the close unchanged to 4 1/4c higher. Oats were up to 4 3/4c and rye up to 4c.

Provisions moved in, the close finishing 10c to 12c higher for lamb and 7c to 10c for ribs.

Wheat Slows in Start.

Both wheat and corn were somewhat reactionary, with the session, corn getting under way first and finally bringing up the wheat. The latter was sold on the theory that the rains will increase the movement of damp, low grade wheat, which is not needed, as the local stock is already large. While the contract was firm, the canola, the low grade stuff finds a buyer market at present. Nebraska points as well as several places in Kansas reported much smaller offerings. However, the farmers are unable to carry the damp wheat, and unless the weather is better the wheat will probably be shipped to terminals right from the threshing machines.

Export buying of wheat was of small volume, with 1,400 bushels sent from Liverpool. Receipts here were 545 cars; primary receipts, 2,167,000 bushels against 1,601,000 bushels a year ago. Commission houses took the slack out of the market on the break, and at time the market showed symptoms of being overstocked.

Whipping showed some strength on the eight day, but the market is still far from firm. Temperatures showed quite a fall front. The rally of No. 1 north at Winnipeg was 16 1/4c over the October.

BIG Trade in Corn.

The big range in September corn showed the activity in this month, and there was also heavy trading in the December and May, with some selling of the deferred months against purchases of the September, and also some selling of the wheat futures against buying of corn. Leaders on the bull side gave the market support at times. On the rally there was considerable swelling.

Cash wheat was about the same basis, with contract grades, all selling at 40c or better. No. 2 yellow selling at 22c. Country offerings were not heavy, but the extreme rally caught some resting orders to sell. Receipts were 182 cars, with primary receipts $7,000 bu., against 72,000 bu. a year ago. Weather conditions were favorable, and the crop was dry and warm conditions to mature. Shipping sales were 340,000 bu., with charters for 360,000 bu.

Oats followed the rally in corn to some extent, with a lack of pig pressure, while there was some commission house support. Wet weather is checking the movement again. Receipts were 188 cars, primary receipts, 1,100 bu., against 64,000 bu. a year ago. Light and medium grade sales were 160,000 bu., with prices about steady. Country offerings of oats were not heavy. Ryce prices failed to improve much, even with wheat and other grain higher. There was a little export business at the seaboard, and receipt of rye in the northwest were light.

Provisions Close Strong.

Packers were credited with buying provisions, and the market was strong. Both the commission houses and large enough to keep the prices down. Receipts here were 26,000, with 97,000 in the west, against 92,000 a year ago. Hog prices were at the highest level in many weeks, the top being 8 3/8c. Leaf lard was stronger and relatively 10c better than September. The export trade in products was reported fair, with domestic trade continuing excellent. Prices follow:

Lamb.

Export sales of wheat in all positions totalled 250,000 bu. to 300,000 bu. Monday's sales were 500,000 bu., including 150,000 bu. have winter and the balance Manitoba and 400,000 bu. wheat and 100,000 bu. oats. Montreal shipments this week at 500,000 bu. with 140,000 bu. taken.

Domestic sales of wheat at Chicago were 20,000 bu. corn, 240,000 bu. and oats, 160,000 bu. Charters were for 300,000 bu. wheat, 1,000 bu. corn, 1,000 bu. oats, 1,000 bu. Georgia Bay, and 110,000 bu. corn to Buffalo. Sales of 100,000 bu. wheat were to go to storage.

Wheat prices and premiums generally were strong, with 543 cars at Chicago showing 1 1/2c higher, 1,000 bu. premium, 1,000 bu. low grade sold at 14c. Montreal shipments this week at 500,000 bu. Low grade sold at about the same discounts as Monday, with No. 3 at 20c to 22c, and No. 4 at 20c to 22c. Some 400,000 bu. and sample grade mostly at 60c-$ under, with some down to 50c.

No. 1 and 2 were 14c higher, cars a week ago and 1 1/4c cars last year. Kansas City was unchanged to 1 1/4c, and 1 1/4c cars a week ago. Omaha was unchanged to 1 1/4c higher, while the September closed 2 1/4c 2 3/4c higher.

The upheaval in corn prices and the forecast for lower temperatures and possible frosts in western Canada lifted wheat moderately, with the close unchanged to 4 1/4c higher. Oats were up to 4 3/4c and rye up to 4c.

Provisions moved in, the close finishing 10c to 12c higher for lamb and 7c to 10c for ribs.

Wheat Slow in Start.

Both wheat and corn were somewhat reactionary, with the session, corn getting under way first and finally bringing up the wheat. The latter was sold on the theory that the rains will increase the movement of damp, low grade wheat, which is not needed, as the local stock is already large. While the contract was firm, the canola, the low grade stuff finds a buyer market at present.

Country offerings were not heavy, but the extreme rally caught some resting orders to sell. Receipts were 182 cars, with primary receipts $7,000 bu., against 72,000 bu. a year ago. Weather conditions were favorable, and the crop was dry and warm conditions to mature. Shipping sales were 340,000 bu., with charters for 360,000 bu.

Wheat buying of wheat was of small volume, with 1,400 bushels sent from Liverpool. Receipts here were 545 cars; primary receipts, 2,167,000 bushels against 1,601,000 bushels a year ago. Commission houses took the slack out of the market on the break, and at time the market showed symptoms of being overstocked.

Whipping showed some strength on the eight day, but the market is still far from firm. Temperatures showed quite a fall front. The rally of No. 1 north at Winnipeg was 16 1/4c over the October.

BIG Trade in Corn.

The big range in September corn showed the activity in this month, and there was also heavy trading in the December and May, with some selling of the deferred months against purchases of the September, and also some selling of the wheat futures against buying of corn. Leaders on the bull side gave the market support at times. On the rally there was considerable swelling.

Cash wheat was about the same basis, with contract grades, all selling at 40c or better. No. 2 yellow selling at 22c. Country offerings were not heavy, but the extreme rally caught some resting orders to sell. Receipts were 182 cars, with primary receipts $7,000 bu., against 72,000 bu. a year ago. Weather conditions were favorable, and the crop was dry and warm conditions to mature. Shipping sales were 340,000 bu., with charters for 360,000 bu.

Oats followed the rally in corn to some extent, with a lack of pig pressure, while there was some commission house support. Wet weather is checking the movement again. Receipts were 188 cars, primary receipts, 1,100 bu., against 64,000 bu. a year ago. Light and medium grade sales were 160,000 bu., with prices about steady. Country offerings of oats were not heavy. Ryce prices failed to improve much, even with wheat and other grain higher. There was a little export business at the seaboard, and receipt of rye in the northwest were light.

Provisions Close Strong.

Packers were credited with buying provisions, and the market was strong. Both the commission houses and large enough to keep the prices down. Receipts here were 26,000, with 97,000 in the west, against 92,000 a year ago. Hog prices were at the highest level in many weeks, the top being 8 3/8c. Leaf lard was stronger and relatively 10c better than September. The export trade in products was reported fair, with domestic trade continuing excellent. Prices follow:

TESTIES TO USE OF ROCKEFELLER NAME AS LURE

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Aug. 21.—MAX FRIEDL, of Marion, Ind., former president of the bankrupt Black Panther Oil company, on trial with two other officers, told stockholders it was testified today, "My old friends, John D. Rockefeller and Joseph C. Clegg, are the ones who got this company into trouble." The Black Panther has developed." The testimony was given by Milton B. Mishey, former secretary of the company.

Friedl, with Harry E. Lindley of Harrisburg, Pa., vice president of the company, and Reuben Douglass of this city, a director, is charged with fraudulent conversion of more than $10,000,000 of the assets of the company.

The Rockefellers were unable to attend the meeting at which Friedl was quoted by Mishey as having mentioned their friendship for him because they are very old and suffer physical infirmities which would stop them from accepting my invitation," it was testified. Friedel said, S. E. Herman, representative of the stockholders, and the award of damages, counsel for the receivers, explained the books of the corporation showed total stock values of about $1,767,000 and that $52,000 bu. last week.

VAST SUMS SENT BACK HOME BY U.S. IMMIGRANTS

BY SCRUTATOR.

The total of emigrant remittances for the first three months of this year, Italy will receive from that source about $42,000,000, of which 80 per cent will come from the United States. The figures are necessarily a rough approximation, as the fluctuations of the currency must be taken into account and only the remittances through the Bank of Naples are accurately known, but Italian statisticians figure that they are 50 per cent of the total.

No American grudges Italy that she has lost her long friendship of the two nations has been strengthened by Italy's recent adoption of some of our old frontier stuff, on a scale that fairly takes our breath away. But the figures do suggest one of the difficulties ahead for the selective immigration plans of Secretary Davis. Such a system inevitably demands the cooperation of other countries. We all know that with one conflict of interest—the desire of the old countries to use us as a dump for inferior material. But even when they send us good material, first class brain and brawn, it is to their interest to send single men who will remit money to the old home town. Decidedly our interest lies the other way. We want families, not floaters.

The "we" in this case does not include some short sighted industrial corporations or rabid anti-labor doctrinaires. One of the criticisms leveled at the present quota laws of those people is that it brings over too many women. Their idea of social responsibility was strikingly illustrated out west in 1920, when those who had immigrated here had been brought into this country to work in the sugar beet fields were turned loose on western communities as objects of charity. Local sugar beet admirers availed themselves of their tiny savings. The tragedies of immigration are not all enacted at Ellis Island. They take place when an industrial depression throws the newcomers on the streets—and many believe that such depressions are hastened by their admissions.

Although Italians send much money back home, the bulk of those who have arrived have founded families. This is shown by the fact that of the total number of children born in the vital statistics of this country in 1918, those born on foreign soil were second in number only to those born of native parents. In that year births from native parents were 316,546, or 65 per cent of the total, while children of Italian parents numbered 76,351, or about 6 per cent of all.

While much support has been given to the idea of selective immigration and arrangement of quotas on the basis of the 1890 census, the sentiment for a total "cutout" of immigration for a number of years will probably be strong in the next congress. Labor is aware of the fact that its real wages were going up during the flood of new arrivals up to 1914. It is also aware that there is a third since that time. The sentiment for a "cutout" is supported in many other quarters. Dr. Raymond Poirier of Johns Hopkins University, one of the few recent investigators who has declared his belief that the melting pot is really producing an amalgamation of this country, and who is optimistic over the ultimate result of the blending process, is strongest in favor of intermarriage immigration to aid in the process of breeding a new American type. He says:

"From the standpoint of quality of the population in respect to health, intelligence, and all round efficiency it is suggested that the wisest policy now is for the country to pursue would be one which might be called intermarriage or permanent immigration."

"Let all immigration of any sort whatever be rigidly and completely prohibited for a period of, say, 20 years, to be followed by a period of, say, ten years of free immigration, with only such restrictions as physical, economic, and criminal as we have in the immediate past imposed. During the period of no immigration the foreigners of the last influx and their children would become sensibly assimilated and fused with the American population."

Spain is lacking for Dr. Poirier's analysis of the marriage statistics proving amalgamation and his further arguments. The plan for a "cut out" of all immigration would be it by its simplicity lessen the clash of racial prejudices in our own politics, deprive the Asiatic powers of their best men, and give the melting pot a fair trial. Dr. Poirier is right, and the ultra-McMillians are wrong, about the possibility of amalgamating diverse types advantageously, we ought to know in twenty more years, because 10 per cent of births now taking place in this country may be called "hybrid," although no more hybrid probably than the remote origins of most of the present population.

GER
SOFT COAL CLUB
FOR HARD COAL
STRIKE IS PL

U. S. to Flood Ea with Substitute.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENN
Washington, D. C., Aug. 22.—(UPI)—Though prepared to make further efforts to prevent the coal strike of anthracite coal miners, President Coolidge took steps to assure an adequate supply of substitutes in the event of a shutdown materials Sept. 1.

The President this morning named Francis R. Wadleigh, coal distributor, and Acting Chairman of the Interstate Commerce Commission to the White House to attend his conference session to establish, at once, a speedy and systematic distribution of bituminous coal, coke and other substitutes to the anthracite coal states.

Calls Governors' Conference
Following the conference Mr. Wadleigh telephoned the governors of eastern states and New England and representatives to meet him at a conference in New York next Tuesday to consider distribution plans.

Mr. Coolidge reiterated his assurance that the people must not be allowed to suffer from lack of fuel, and he assured the officials who have delayed the release of coal supplies the assistance shortage in the event of a strike can be met by bituminous coal and other substitutes provided the distribution can be speeded. The problem is mainly transportation, the President was informed.

One of the President's closest advisers in dealing with the three states expressed the opinion that no major shutdown would seriously affect the anthracite mining industry. The coal, he said, would be used in the use of bituminous coal and fuel oil and finding the much lower would remediate and encourage to permit the permanent substitution.

Work to Avert Strike
The President's activities today described at the White House related to preparing for the worst, though every effort is to be made to avert the strike. Just what will be done will not be determined until the federal coal commission submits its report assessing the responsibility for the collapse of the situation between the operators and miners union at Atlantic City.

It is generally regarded as probable, however, that if other expedients fail, the President will ask the representatives of the operators and of the miners to Washington for a conference.

The invitations to participate in the distribution conference at New York were sent to the governors of states in which anthracite coal is largely or almost exclusively produced, Delaware, District of Columbia, Maine, Maryland, Massachusetts, New Hampshire, New Jersey, New York, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, Vermont.

West Not Invited
The west was not invited, explained, for the reason that relatively little anthracite is produced in that region, and reports indicate the supplies already on hand in the Alleghenies are adequate to meet the emergency. In view of the governors' conference.

In order to formulate plans for distribution of bituminous coal for domestic use in the event of an anthracite consuming strike, the governors of the states interested are requested to send representatives to a conference at New York.

It is hoped that every state represented, so full disclosure can be had and definite action taken to insure the distribution of amounts of coal and coke available may suffer no inconvenience.

Halfway to Be Represented
Representatives of the states represented probably will be present at the conference, and a representative of the Interstate Commerce Commission will be present, as distribution is largely a matter of transportation.

An important subject will be the matter of the consumer in the use of anthracite, as well as a systematic plan of education can be made of greater practical and efficient use and will thereby reduce.
